Price May Advance, Although Enormous Supply Has Been Stored Away.

BIG PLANTS SHUT DOWN

Food Law Prohibits Use of Grain for Manufacture of Liquors.

An Elizabeth street wine merchant says the half pint of whiskey which is selling for 25 cents soon will be retailed at 30 cents and that the price will continue to rise until New York's supply of whiskey is exhausted, or until the war ends and the Government lifts its ban on the distillation of that liquor. New York's supply, it is estimated, will last, at the present rate of retailing three years. It may be found on sale here later than 1920, however, for there are those who predict that the increased cost of whiskey will bring about substitution of wines and beer.

At 11 o'clock last night every whiskey still in the United States ceased to the distilleries of Maryland was 1,926,340 gallons. The distillation of alcohol was 21,042,842 gallons a year. The average yearly consumption of rye was estimated at between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 bushels.

At 11 o'clock last night every whis-key still in the United States ceased its operations, or, at least, was supposed to, in accordance with the prohibition measure of the food control bill, which was approved August 10. Many of the concerns, it is reported, worked up to the last minute, but several of them had shut down or gone out of business had shut down or gone out of business completely previously to the eleventh hour. Very few of the 605 large manual facturers the country over will continue to run their plants to make alcohol for to run their plants to make alcohol for commercial purposes, because of the cost necessary for new equipment.

Estimates now place the amount of distilled liquor held in storage in this country at 210,000,000 gallons. This will not be increased by importation, for ships carrying whiskey have only until midnight to unload. Just what will be done with cargoes arriving at American ports after that hour will be learned from orders which are expected to arrive from the office of the Secretary of the Treasury. There are two possibilities—that the supplies coming in will be confiscated by the Government and, perhaps. scated by the Government and, perhaps dumped overboard, or that the supplies will be returned to the ports from which they were shipped.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—Deputy City Col-lector George F. Lohman estimated to-day that Chicago will lose 1,500 of its 7,000 salcons, now that the manufacture of whiskey has ceased. Whiskey prices jumped 10 cents a gallon to-day and prices will take further advances as the supply decreases. Even the price of beer is going to advance, and within a few weeks asloon men any 5 cent beers will is going to advance, and within a few weeks, saloon men say, 5 cent beers will become a matter of history.

Prices of liquors, both retail and wholesale, took a big jump to-day in Chicago. Eight-year-old whiskey which sold at $2.60 a gallon a year ago was quoted to-day at $4. Imported gin which sold at $9.85 a gallon now brings the wholesaler $20 a gallon. Scotch whiskey has advanced to $25 and $36 a case of twenty-four bottles.

Baltimons, Md., Bept. 8.—When the Pederal law forbidding the manufacture of whiskey as a beverage went into effect at 11 o'clock to-night it found all of the twenty-seven distilleries in the Maryland district closed but one. It was explained that these plants usually shut down for three months in the summer because this is an unfavorable time for making whiskey. The effect of the law on the working force therefore will not be especially serious as most of the employees had gone into other occupations. All of the plants still have supplies of whiskey on hand which will be held in bond ustil the revenue license tax is paid and it is released by the Government.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—The full effect in Pennsylvania of the law prohibiting the manufacture of whiskey from grains after 11 o'clock to-night cannot be determined accurately at this time, according to experts in the trade. There are many whiskey distilleries in the State, most of them small, and it is said several thousand persons will be thrown out of work by the closing of these plants. It was declared that the enforcement of the law will result in a large depreciation in values of distillery properties. Most of the plants are built in isolated or country sections in order to obtain pure water, and therefore are not easily converted for other industrial Edward T. Fleming of this city, an authority on the industry, to-day said the suggestion to turn small distilleries into plants for the manufacture of commercial alcohol is impracticable because the cost would be so great that it would be unprofitable.

Distillers believe, Mr. Fleming said, that the new law will "resuit in the elimination of all bad whiskey, which will be a good thing if it does not further result in the illicit production of a more poisonous beverage."

Another effect in his opinion, Mr.
Fleming added, would be the forcing out of business of many retail establishments, due to the soaring price of whiskey, thus making the cost almost prohibitive to the average consumer.

The society has asked the Food Administration Board to call an immediate conference to consider the potato situation, declaring that the outlook for both growers and consumers is serious for the reason that no provision has been made to care for the probable large potato crop. The surplus this year, the Government estimates, will be not less than 150,000,000 bushels.

"As it manifestly is impossible to export any large numbers of potatoes this year," the society says, "it is necessary, we believe, to devise plans, and that speedily, to increase domestic consump-

The society points out that the present potato crop, owing to the high cost of seed, fertilizers and labor, has cost the farmers $1 a bushel to produce. It gives warning that unless adequate provision is made for marketing the crop profitably the farmer may not respond again to appeals for increased production.

The society suggests that "potato days" be substituted for the proposed "meatless days."

"Meat price increases are not due to big profits, so far as the meat purveyors are concerned," he says. "It is actually a fact that the fresh meat from the steer or hog or sheep is sold by the packer to the retailer at a figure which often falls to pay for the raw product that is, the animal on the hoof. The profits which enable the packer to handle meat at less than cost are due to the utilization of those portions of the animals which until recent years were wasted or destroyed.
